FOREWORD

The 2015 FIM Motocross World Championship promises to be one of the most exciting of these past few years. All eyes are upon the MXGP class where the reigning World Champions Antonio Cairoli (MXGP) and Ryan Villopoto (AMA Supercross and FIM World Championship) will battle it out for world supremacy. However, it would be a mistake to focus exclusively on just these two riders. Last year, Jeremy Van Horebeek, Gautier Paulin and Clément Desalle all proved they "have what it takes".

In the MX2 class, France's Jordi Tixier will be defending his number one plate against Jeffrey Herlings. The Dutch rider, who dominated the class in 2012 and 2013, narrowly lost the title in 2014 because of injury. He is now on a mission, to capture back "his" Championship. Let us see what the "whiz kid" can come up with. Here too, there are some others who cannot be counted out, among them Dylan Ferrandis, Tim Gajser, Aleksandr Tonkov, Max Anstie, Valentin Guillod and Jeremy Seewer. Pauls Jonass and Jorge Zaragoza are two new hot prospects for the class, so there will be some fireworks coming up.

In the Women's class, Kiara Fontanesi will be trying to add a fourth World Championship to her prize list. She will get some tough competition from the likes of Meghan Rutledge, Livia Lancelot, Nathalie Kane and Larissa Papenmeyer.

There is no doubt that the profile of the FIM Motocross World Championships has been boosted by the presence of Ryan Villopoto. This - as well as overseas rounds in Qatar, Thailand, Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and the USA - is very encouraging and shows that YouthStream's hard work and investments are paying off. Motocross is going global and its many fans can rejoice, as 2015 has all the ingredients to satisfy their motocross hunger.

On behalf of the FIM, I would like to thank all the stakeholders for their efforts in making the 2015 FIM Motocross World Championship happen: YouthStream, National Federations, Organisers, Manufacturers, Riders, Teams, circuits owners, media and of course you, motocross fan and spectator.

Enjoy!

Vito Ippolito
FIM President

Dear MXGP Friends,

Over the last few years, especially last year and this year, the Motocross World Championship has made large bounds ahead and thanks to the tremendous work made by Youthstream in cooperation with the FIM, FIM-Europe, organizers, manufacturers, teams, riders, media, sponsors and to the great support received from the MXGP fans today Motocross has become one of the most popular sports in the world. Thanks to the modern tools which have been developed, MXGP is being distributed worldwide providing fans from everywhere with the possibility to really enter our world and feel to be a part of it all.

2014 saw an impressive TV coverage of 1.3 billion TV viewers for more than 4,900 hours of broadcasting. Again in 2015 every continent will be covered via major broadcasters: Europe on Eurosport, USA on CBS Sport, Latin America on FOX Sport, Middle East and Africa on BeIN, Asia and Oceania on FOX Sport, and in addition to the local broadcasters. Youthstream will continue to improve the TV production providing TV viewers with thrilling images.

You will be pleased to see that Youthstream became actively present on the main social networks in 2013, the reason for this is because the average age of MXGP followers was high and something needed to be done. By being easily accessible to young potential fans we have seen the interest in MXGP is growing rapidly. After only one and a half years MXGP is the leading off-road sport in the world in the social media. You can find MXGP on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and YouTube where MXGP has its own channel. The new MXGP official website provides even more information than before and it is simple for all users. MXGP-TV.com is where you can watch entire events live including all the World and European Championship classes and of course the famous Motocross of Nations, on MXGP-TV.com you can also find programs on Youthstream promoted events, like the Junior World Motocross Championship, the Motocross of European Nations and the Snowcross World Championship. MXGP Mag came out for the first time just after the 2013 MXoN in Germany, it offers an interactive and fun way to be informed about inside info and it's followed by thousands of fans and insiders worldwide.

Thanks to these innovative moves we are already seeing more and more interest from youth in the Motocross world. After 2 years MXGP Academy's existence it's fabulous seeing the number of potential talented riders attending these training schools. MXGP Academy prepares young enthusiastic riders to make the step into the professional world with expert advice on a technical aspect and management.

Youthstream promotes a number of Championships including the MXGP World Championship, the MX2 World Championship, the Motocross of Nations, Women's Motocross World Championship, the Veteran Motocross World Cup, the Junior Motocross World Championship, the European Motocross Championships (65cc, 85cc, 125cc, 150cc, 250cc and 300cc), the Motocross of European Nations and the Snowcross World Championship. Amongst these Championships there were more than 2,800 participants taking part. There are 140 people working for Youthstream for the organization, media and management of these Championships, plus an average of 500 more people providing services for the local organizer for each GP making a total of about 9,000 people. During this moment of crisis Youthstream is extremely proud to actively participate on a social aspect by assuring more than 1,000 jobs linked to the events it promotes.

Youthstream's work is not only what you see (television, media, marketing, sponsorship, and of course the racing) but it has a lot of 'backstage' work that is less visible such as the organization of the event, the designing, engineering and construction of the race track, the logistics, and hospitality. We also manage the media center, the paddock, passes, traffic, security, the management of teams' and riders' entries and their needs, the TV production and postproduction, the time-keeping, travel and hotels, and in cooperation with FIM we take care of sporting issues and the implementation of the Regulations.

For the globalization of our sport, which ensures the Championships' stability and credibility, Youthstream endeavors constantly to create interest in all continents. For 2015 Qatar will once again be the MXGP series opener, then the tour goes on to the exotic round in Thailand and then on to Argentina before returning to the traditional European circuits. In August and September MXGP will be go to Brazil, then will return to Europe, the Netherlands, and then to Mexico and the last round will be held in USA, Glen Helen. There is a lot of interest shown towards our sport from every continent and we are negotiating to bring MXGP to more countries in the years to come.

We thank the FIM, FIM-E, the organizers, the riders, the teams, manufacturers, fans, sponsors and media who believe in the potential of MXGP and who support us.

MXGP OF PATAGONIA ARGENTINA

NEUQUEN | MARCH 29

ROAD DIRECTIONS

By car:

From Bariloche you will drive towards the north and about 20 kms away you will find the route to Villa La Angostura which is 70 kms away. It is all paved and it has a beautiful overlook of all the coast line of Nahuel Huapi Lake.

From the North you can get here along the Seven Lakes Route, which you can take in San Martin de los Andes. You will have a 90 kms drive while observing the mountain range lakes with their awesome sights.

Frontier passages:

Cardenal Samoré Passage (former Puyehue)

It is 1314 AMSL (42° 29' 07" South Latitude – 70° 25' 91" West Longitude) and it is open all year long. It is considered the second most important in the country because it has direct communication with Puerto Montt (220 kms away) and Osorno (117 kms away) along the Chilean Austral Motorway and with all the other parts of the Chilean Patagonia.

The road is paved in almost all its stretches, you must be careful in the stretches which are still being built. It is an important commercial passage, which makes the traffic quite thick. The road is of rubble over National Route 231, it is averagely 7 metres wide and it is in good conditions. The distance to the limit is 4 kms.5

HISTORY

HISTORY OF THE FIM MOTOCROSS WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP

The history of Motocross begins in the early 20th century when the first events took place in Great Britain, specifically during the 1920s when the first competitions known as "scrambles" were held. Once the Second World War ended, the sport started to grow from a national to an international level with the very first team event known as Motocross des Nations, racing with 500cc machines and taking place in 1947 in the Netherlands. Although the Belgian rider Auguste Mingels was faster, the team classification prevailed and Great Britain claimed the first Trophy. From then on this special event was held regularly every year, and mostly dominated by the British team until the end of the 1960s. The Trophée des Nations, team event for 250cc machines, was added in 1961, and the Coupe des Nations (for teams with 125cc motorcycles) in 1981. In 1984, the rules were changed: the three classes would race together, each time entering three riders. Currently America is the most successful Nation in this event which they have won 20 times.

Back in the 50s, on the individual level, Motocross started to grow fast, with many events held in various countries. This led the FIM to introduce the first European Championship in 1952. That maiden series was open to 500cc motorcycles and the first winner was Belgian Victor Leloup onboard an FN machine. He was followed by August Mingels in '53 and '54, before British riders John Draper and Leslie Archer took over. But another country was also reaching the top in Motocross – individual and team – in those days, beside Great Britain and Belgium, that country was Sweden.

From European to World Championship. Joel Robert (250cc) and Roger De Coster (500cc) make their name.

After five years of European Championship, Motocross took an important step forward with the series being promoted to the World Championship status in 1957 – winner was Swedish Bill Nilsson onboard an AJS machine. Still in 1957 the first European Cup for 250cc motorcycles was created to match the popularity of this upcoming discipline. This Cup would last only two years to be promoted to the European Championship status in 1959. Three years later in 1962, the 250cc class had its first World Championship with the eventual winner being legendary Husqvarna mounted Torsten Hallman from Sweden. The Swedish won the Title for two consecutive years until upcoming talent Joel Robert from Belgium steered his CZ to victory collecting the first of six titles - a record which would remain unbeaten until 2002.

Robert would win another five 250cc World Titles from 1968 until 1972, the year of birth of his countryman Stefan Everts, the man who will break all the records 30 years later.

As Japanese manufacturers entered the series in the late 60s, Joel Robert was the first World Championship winner onboard such a machine as he steered the Suzuki to victory in the 250cc class in 1970.

One year later Suzuki would win another 250cc World Title with Robert but success came also in the 500cc class. Now a myth in the sport, in 1971 Roger De Coster and Suzuki won their first 500cc Championship which was also the first of five World Titles for De Coster – all in the 500cc class.

1973-1990

The arrival of the 125cc World Championship. Eric Geboers and Jean Michel Bayle great ambassadors of Motocross.

In 1973 another class, the 125cc, had its dedicated European Championship, which was won for two consecutive years by Belgian André Malherbe on a Zundapp. In 1975 it became a World Championship and Gaston Rahier won the Title straight away onboard a Suzuki, the first manufacturer to ever claim a Title in all three classes.

Malherbe would exploit his early 125cc experience to collect the 500cc World Title in 1980 and 1981 as Belgium was shaping up like the most talented country for Motocross. In 1975 another Belgian, Harry Everts, took his first 250cc World Title. He will win another three Championships in his career before retiring and raising his child Stefan.

In 1982 another star entered the World Motocross Championship with Eric Geboers winning the 125cc Championship after Everts had dominated it for three consecutive years – before Everts, Japanese Akira Watanabe took the 125cc crown in 1978. Geboers would storm through the field to remarkably win all three World Titles 125cc, 250cc and 500cc granting him the nickname of Mr. 875, the sum of 125, 250 and 500. Basically Eric Geboers was the first man to ever win one World Title in each category.

Georges Jobe and Dave Thorpe would also write their names in the record books of the World Champions in these years, while exceptional young guns would come up to establish the base of the next decades of World Motocross.

French Jean Michel Bayle and Italian Alex Puzar won their first titles in 1988 and in 1990 respectively. As Puzar went on for more success in the series, Bayle first moved to Supercross, then to Road Racing collecting strong results and becoming a legend for his incredible talent in motorsports.

1991-2000

New generation four stroke machines enter and win World Titles. Stefan Everts begins his winning streak.

This decade of World Motocross started with the Title of Stefan Everts, currently the most successful Motocross rider ever with 10 World Titles and 101 GP wins to his credit. Onboard a Suzuki, Everts – son of Harry Everts - became World Champion in the 125cc class in 1991 to be succeeded by Greg Albertyn in 1992 as the latter became the first South African to collect a World Title in Motocross.

Albertyn would win other two World Titles in the 250cc class as the 125cc class saw Italian Alessio "Chicco" Chiodi win the Championship for three consecutive years from 1997 until 1999.

Sebastien Tortelli, another of Everts' main rivals throughout his career together with Albertyn, also passed by the 125cc World Championship, which he won in 1996, before winning in 250cc in 1998.

French countryman Frederic Bolley succeeded to Tortelli in 1999 and 2000 winning two consecutive 250cc Titles.

With new generation four stroke machines becoming popular in the GP campaign in 1999 came the first World Title. Yamaha mounted Andrea Bartolini was the first rider to win a Championship with such a machine beating Joel Smets, the 500cc Title winner in the previous two years and also in 2000.

Youthstream celebrates Stefan Everts and the new generation during the years of records. Women and Veterans racing dedicated series.

The last years have seen Motocross develop very quickly courtesy of the professional work of new promoter Youthstream headed by President Giuseppe Luongo, a man who had been involved in Motocross since 1983. Youthstream took the World Motocross Championships and the Motocross of Nations to the next level as the series increased the visits overseas and benefitted from a strong TV and media coverage. Nowadays the riders involved in the Championships come from more than 30 different nations, the races are watched onsite by more than half a million spectators, as the number of TV viewers overtakes one billion.

In 2004 the classes were renamed. The 125cc was called MX2 and is now hosting mainly 250cc four stroke bikes. The 250cc class was renamed MX1 hosting 450cc four stroke machines as the former 500cc class became an open class, the MX3.

The professional set up was matched by excellent racing and new talents going through the ranks such as Steve Ramon, Ben Townley, Antonio "Tony" Cairoli, Tyla Rattray, Tommy Searle just to name a few.

Though this decade will be remembered for the breakthrough of Stefan Everts. The Belgian went on to take his 10th World Title and his 101st GP victory in 2006, his last year of professional racing before retiring and becoming Team Manager for the factory KTM Motocross Team. Everts set the records, which are now the ultimate challenge of the whole younger generations of professional Motocross racers.

2007-2015

The youngsters leave their mark on the FIM Motocross World Championship. Philippaerts, Cairoli, Desalle, Musquin, Roczen, Herlings and many more set the Championship on fire.

These years the young guns of the FIM Motocross World Championship have established their authority on the series.

Ramon succeeded to Everts in the MX1 series in 2007 after the season's dominator Coppins was taken out by a shoulder injury. Italian Cairoli took back the MX2 Title, as 2006 World Champion Pourcel was unable to defend the crown due to an up and down season which ended in a severe back injury.

After two years of team management, Stefan Everts celebrated the first World Title with Tyla Rattray winning the MX2 World Championship in 2008. That was also the year David Philippaerts won his maiden World Title in the MX1 despite it being only his second year in contention.

Year by year the level and speed that Grand Prix riders ride at progresses and now the most skilled ones are aiming to beat the older generations' records. In 2010 Cairoli decided to ride the revolutionary KTM 350cc on which the Italian claimed his fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth World Titles in six consecutive years. The Italian is breaking all the records, and continues to do so as he has won seventy-two Grand Prix's and sits second on the list of most Grand Prix wins, twenty nine behind 'The King' Stefan Everts.

In the MX2, young German talent Ken Roczen joined KTM and obtained his maiden World Title in 2011 in front of his home crowd in Gaildorf, Germany. The talented German also wrote his name in the motocross history of his country before moving to the USA to live his American dream. With Roczen gone, 2012 and 13 have been dominated by Dutch phenomenon Jeffrey Herlings. At the ripe age of eighteen, Herlings has already added two FIM MX2 World Titles to his list of career achievements, which he obtained with two near perfect seasons. 2014 saw Herlings line-up for his third consecutive MX2 World Title with his main goal being to win every Grand Prix.

In 2014 Red Bull KTM Factory Racing's Antonio Cairoli continued to chip away at Stefan Everts ten FIM Motocross World Championship titles taking title number eight in Trindade, Brazil. Jeremy Van Horebeek also stamped his name on the championship as the most consistent rider in the MXGP class banking eleven consecutive podium finishes. After missing the podium at round 13 in Finland, the Belgian bounced back at round 14 in the Czech Republic to take home his first ever MXGP class win. The twenty-four year old finished the season as the vice MXGP world champion.

While the racing in 2014 was amazing, all attention has already turned to 2015 with the championship expected to blow all other seasons out of the water. In 2015 MXGP's talent pool is deeper than ever especially with the arrival of American legend, multi-time AMA supercross and motocross champion, Ryan Villopoto. Villopoto is the first American with a résumé as rich as his to make the transition from the AMA series' to the FIM Motocross World Championship.

2014 produced the best season of MX2 racing the championship is yet to witness, starting with young French star Dylan Ferrandis' win of one race at round one in Qatar. The on-watchers were shocked, to say the least, that the usual dominating force Jeffrey Herlings appeared weaker than he had over the previous two seasons. The Dutch sensation Herlings then went on to admit he was recovering from a leg injury.

After not getting off to the greatest of starts, which allowed the likes of Arnaud Tonus to claim his first ever MX2 round win and Glenn Coldenhoff to take his first ever race win, things went from bad to worst for the two-time FIM MX2 World Champ Herlings when he broke his femur racing for charity right on the heels of wrapping up his third consecutive FIM MX2 World Championship. With Herlings out MX2 became 100% unpredictable, each race was intense from start to finish and each first time win for riders such as Jordi Tixier, Romain Febvre, Max Anstie and Tim Gajser was hard fought and earned.

In a heroic effort to clinch the title despite suffering from an unhealed broken femur, Herlings who had won twelve of the thirteen Grand Prix he contested was forced to settle for second with only four valuable points separating himself and his Red Bull KTM Factory Racing teammate Jordi Tixier. Tixier on the other hand used his 'never give up' attitude to silence his critics, bounce back from a dip and win his first ever FIM Motocross World Championship in impressive style.

Adding to the immense excitement of MXGP 2015, MX2 will also be very interesting. Tixier will be rocking the number 1 plate while the mystery will be how well Herlings recovers from his injury riddled season in 2014. There will also be an array of other young guns to keep an eye on such as the 2014 Monster Energy FIM Motocross of Nations champion Dylan Ferrandis and rising stars Tim Gajser, Valentin Guillod and Red Bull KTM Factory Racing's latest prodigy Pauls Jonass.

HISTORY

MONSTER ENERGY FIM MOTOCROSS OF NATIONS 68 YEARS OF HISTORY

FIRST YEARS: DOMINANCE OF THE BRITISH TEAM

Motocross, known as "scramble" when it was "invented" in the 20s, developed quickly in the 30s. After the war, the FIM elevated this sport at international level by giving birth to the Motocross des Nations (official title in French, run with 500cc motorcycles), a classic event which has been run annually ever since.

The inaugural event was held near The Hague, in the Netherlands, on 20 July 1947. Three nations were invited – the Netherlands, Belgium and Great Britain. The Belgian rider Auguste Mingels was the fastest, but the A team of Great Britain with Bill Nicholson (BSA), Fred Rist (BSA) and Bob Ray (Ariel) won the first team title, ahead of the Belgian "B" squad.

The second "Nations" contest took place in August 1948 in La Fraineuse, close to the Belgian city of Spa. National federations of France, Sweden and Luxembourg were also invited for an event dominated by the local team. Nic Jansen, Marcel Cox and Andre Milhous took first, second and fifth places, clinching the first Trophy for Belgium.

At the end of August 1949 it was the turn of Great Britain to host the final competition of the decade at Brands Hatch. Great Britain won the competition for the second time, thus keeping the Cup indefinitely. The ACU then donated another Cup for the competition's winning team. The Vice-President of the FIM International Sporting Commission Peter Chamberlain had always been a strong supporter of Motocross, and worked a great deal on behalf of the national teams' competition. After he passed away in 1954, the cup was officially named after him.

In the 50s, the British dominance was quite strong: seven victories out of 10 in the Motocross des Nations before 1960. The only exceptions were the victories of Belgium in 1951 and Sweden in 1955 and 1958.

A competition for 250cc machines, named the Trophée des Nations, was created by the FIM as from the 1961 season. Victories in the first years were clinched by the Swedes after two initial successes for Great Britain. In the 500cc team event Great Britain lost against Sweden in 1961/62, but then won five years in a row, reaching the number of 14 victories in 20 years, however their last win was in 1967 and it would take 27 years before they won again.

HARD FIGHTS

In Kishinev – then in the Soviet Union – the Russian team took the Chamberlain Trophy for the first time. Then Belgium finally won again the Trophy in Farleigh Castle (1969) after chasing after it for 18 years, with legendary names such as Roger de Coster, Joel Robert and Sylvain Geboers.

The 70s saw a big change at the mechanical level, with the massive arrival of Japanese manufacturers. Suzuki started first, quickly followed by Yamaha, Honda and Kawasaki. The first years of the decade were shared between Sweden and Belgium. In Sweden 1974, behind the local team, a US team appeared for the first time on the rostrum, in the second place, composed of Jim Pomeroy (Bultaco), Brad Lackey (Husqvarna), Marty Tripes (Husqvarna) and Jimmy Weinert (Kawasaki), just ahead of the Russian squad including 250cc World Champion Guennady Moisseev. In 1975 in Czechoslovakia, the local team finished ahead of Belgium – despite the presence of three World Champions, Roger de Coster, Harry Everts and Gaston Rahier - and Great Britain. Two wins of the Belgian team preceded the second victory of a Russian team, still with Guennady Moisseev.

In the Trophée des Nations contest, Belgium conquered all titles except one (Russia in 1979) as of 1969 until 1980. In the Motocross des Nations Belgium again won two titles (79, 80) before the American domination became effective. Having missed both events in the two previous years, the American team arrived at Lommel in Belgium in September 1981 for the Trophée des Nations with four Honda riders managed by former World Champion Roger de Coster. Danny Laporte, Chuck Sun, Johnny O'Mara and Donnie Hansen destroyed the opposition, and one week later won again in the Motocross des Nations in Bielstein, Germany. Changes were made in the team from one year to the next, but it did not change anything. The American field was full of top riders during the 80s, and De Coster's team got eight victories (four in each team competition) in four years.

In 1980 the FIM decided to introduce a third Motocross team contest with 125cc motorcycles: the Coupe des Nations. The Italian team led by Michele Rinaldi won the first two titles, followed by Belgium (with Eric Geboers) and the Netherlands (with Kees Van der Ven and John Van de Berk).

NEW FORMAT

In 1985 a new format combining all three classes in a single Motocross des Nations was introduced by the FIM, gathering all three classes (125cc, 250cc and 500cc) with one rider in each class and three races per event: 125/500, 125/250, 250/500.

Nothing could stop the Americans though - this would only happen in 1994, after 17 consecutive victories (13 in the Motocross des Nations, and the last four of the Trophee des Nations), against...Great Britain, in Roggenburg, Switzerland.

Their teams always integrated world-recognized top riders. Danny "Magoo" Chandler won all four heats in the team contests in 1982, but perhaps the greatest win of all came at Maggiora in 1986 when America's trio of David Bailey, Ricky Johnson and Johnny O'Mara went through all three heats unbeaten by the rest of the world.

After Great Britain's win in 1994, it was the turn of Belgium to be back at the top of the competition in 1995 with Stefan Everts, Joel Smets and Marnicq Bervoets. But the Americans were still there. In '96 in Jerez, the team driven by multi-champion Jeremy McGrath beat the French and Belgian teams. Then, the US team would be off the rostrum for three consecutive years, which saw two Belgian wins and the first crown for Italy (with World Champions Andrea Bartolini and Alessio Chiodi, and also Claudio Federici), in 1999 in Brazil, ahead of France and Belgium. Once again the Americans were back in 2000 in St Jean d'Angely, led by their new top rider Ricky Carmichael. In Namur 2001, it was finally the turn of the French team to clinch their first victory (with David Vuillemin, Yves Demaria and Luigi Séguy), beating the Belgians on their home track. Italy won a perturbed 2002 edition, and Belgium - still with the record holder in individual World titles Stefan Everts - won the 2003 and 2004 contest, before the US comeback in the last five editions, James Stewart having replaced Carmichael as the team's top rider in 2006. Carmichael was back in 2007, celebrating his last Motocross appearance in Budds Creek while Stewart was part of the 2008 winning team.

In 2009 the event came back to Italy after an absence of 23 years, this time in Franciacorta. The American Team got the Trophy again but failed in repeating their countrymen's performance in 1986 at Maggiora. The trio made of Ryan Dungey, Jake Weimer and Ivan Tedesco struggled against nations such as France, Belgium and Italy. Eventually USA won from France and Belgium while a crash of Italy's top rider and multi-time World Champion Antonio Cairoli in heat three ended the team's hopes of victory.

In 2010 the FIM Motocross of Nations was back in the USA where the home riders (Team USA) obtained their 21st Chamberlain Trophy in Lakewood, Denver, thanks to the performance of Ryan Dungey, Trey Canard and Andrew Short. The German team, who was leading the standings after race two thanks to the superb racing of youngster Ken Roczen and Max Nagl, were finally second followed by the Belgian team in third.

The following year it was a turning point for the event, as Monster Energy played an important role and became the title sponsor of the 2011 FIM Motocross of Nations. Saint Jean d'Angely in France was the chosen scenario for the 65th edition of the MXoN and the French fans witnessed a dramatic ending. The French team got into the final heat leading the classification with nine points advantage over team USA, but in the decisive heat Pourcel ended up with an unfortunate DNF allowing the Americans to obtain their 22nd victory ahead of France and Australia, who were very consistent throughout the whole event.

In 2012, the Monster Energy FIM Motocross of Nations went back to Lommel, the same circuit where Team USA started to dominate the event beating the Belgians on home soil in 1981. During the 2012 edition Team USA struggled a lot in the deep sand of Lommel and they could only finish on the third step of the podium, breaking their impressive seventh winning streak. The German team was the most consistent and obtained their maiden Chamberlain Trophy, while the home team finished with a well-deserved second position.

2013's Monster Energy FIM Motocross of Nations in Teutschenthal, Germany, was probably one of the most anticipated events ever in the history of motocross. Heading into the event Team Germany would be defending the crown on their home turf while Team Belgium and USA would be lining up with hopes of redeeming themselves after a bitter defeat the previous year in Lommel, Belgium. While the pressure was laid heavily upon the local boys Team Germany's Max Nagl, Ken Roczen and Dennis Ullrich, a crash which resulted in injury for Dennis Ullrich soon blew the teams hopes of a podium finish leaving the race to be duked out by Team Belgium and Team USA. With the final waving of the chequered flag it was surprisingly Team Belgium who narrowly took the victory ahead of Team USA. While the biggest surprise was Italy's third place finish after their captain, seven-time FIM Motocross World Champion, Antonio Cairoli dominated both his races for the second year in a row.

Onto 2014, the Monster Energy FIM Motocross of Nations tackled the loamy circuit of Kegums, Latvia for the first time in history. With the base of the circuit being classed as a sandy, yet nothing like Lommel, the defending champions Team Belgium were the favourites. Of course Team USA had their devoted fans backing them too while the eventual winners Team France were the most criticised team going in with all three riders, Gautier Paulin, Steven Frossard and Dylan Ferrandis being Kawasaki riders and KTM's FIM MX2 World Champion Jordi Tixier being excluded.

Despite the harsh criticism, Team France couldn't be flawed on the weekend as Paulin rode amazing to dominate every race, which was earnestly backed up by the outstanding performances of teammates Frossard and Ferrandis. With Team France being victorious, Team Belgium also rode solid with their team of Jeremy Van Horebeek, Kevin Strijbos and Julien Lieber for second while Team USA made up of Ryan Dungey, Eli Tomac and Jeremy Martin were dropped back to the third step of the podium.

Throughout the years this event, whose English name - Motocross of Nations – was officially adopted in 2003, has become the peak of not only the FIM Motocross World Championship season but motocross seasons across the globe.

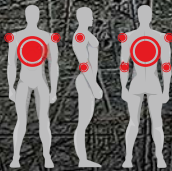

Looking to 2015, double the anticipation of 2013 when the German's were defending the crown on their home territory in Teutschenthal, and you will have something close to the level of excitement heading into Ernee, France this year where the 69th edition of this extraordinary event will take place. As well as Team France being the defending champions, Ernee will celebrate a decade since their ground-breaking edition of the FIM Motocross of Nations back in 2005, the event that is known as 'the turning point' of MXoN. Brace yourself, MXoN 2015 is guaranteed to be epic!

All-rounded better.

The new, rounder design boosts airflow. So do the minimized seams made possible by a revolutionary micro-gluing process:

Shorter seams = more foam = more flow.

Innovations like these – perfected with the help of KTM, Honda and other teams – seal Twin Air's place as the best all-round filter ever.

KEEPING UP WITH KIARA

As one of the most recognized and successful riders in women's motocross, Kiara Fontanesi is the target for all females who like to spend their weekends in the dirt. With a whopping three FIM women's motocross world titles to her name, there is no slowing the determined Italian down.

Born and bred in Parma, Italy, Kiara started riding at a very young age after watching her brother rip around on a mini-bike. One ride later and the little, then gymnast, was hooked and ready to race.

At the age of fifteen, Kiara decided it was time to take on the world and she entered the 2009 FIM Women's Motocross World Championship. While her success wasn't immediate, a season of training and perseverance worked in her favor as she came out all guns blazing at the final round of the 2009 WMX championship in Lierop, The Netherlands, and won!

The following year, in 2010, Kiara confirmed she was permanent force to be reckoned with as she pulled off a second over all at the season opener in Bulgaria and then chased that result up with a series of podium finishes and a couple of race wins finishing fourth in the overall championship standings.

In 2011, Kiara started to master the movement in her right hand, which resulted in loads of laps led in the 2011 WMX World Championship. After a season of bar bashing and win-a-bout results, Kiara had to settle for second behind the five time FIM WMX champion Stephanie Laier.

2012 was like a coming of age for Kiara. After coming so close to the title in 2011, the eighteen year-old was on a mission to accomplish her long life dream of becoming world champion. Not only did she do just that, she completely creamed the field wrapping up the championship one round early in Matterley Basin, Great Britain.

World domination had been achieved, but at nineteen years old one world title wasn't enough and Kiara went on to claim her second consecutive WMX world title in similar style. After two years of dominance in women's motocross, Kiara was finally challenged. Although the competition was very stiff in 2014, Kiara still managed to rise above and claimed her third FIM WMX title.

This year Kiara is training towards her fourth FIM women's motocross world title. She knows, as it was last year, the girls will be fast and it will be a challenge but the driven Italian has already said she is mentally ready and come Qatar, round one, she will be physically ready too.

2014 CHAMPIONS

STEVEN CLARKE EMX250 CHAMPION

After seven rounds of bar to bar racing in what was one of the most intense EMX250 season's ever, CNC Doors KTM's Steven Clarke edged out HSF Logistic Motorsports Brian Bogers to be crowned 2014 European EMX250 champion.

Hailing from Stourbridge, England, Steven Clarke, known to his friends and fans as Scuba Steve, is already somewhat of an international success story. Life as a pro motocross rider all started for the now twenty-four year-old after a trip to the USA at age eleven. It was then the tenacious youngster realized that this was the path he wanted to take and since hasn't looked back.

In his travels, Steve has seen success in the UK, Europe, America and Australia with one of his most successful moments being his first ever world title, which he claimed in Jinin, Czech Republic when he won the 2005 FIM Junior Motocross World Championship 85cc.

A couple of years later, the talented young Brit started to spend a lot of time across the Atlantic in America where he would train and race as a top amateur. In 2007 and 2008 he tore up Loretta Lynns with three podium finishes in that time, a win in '07 and a second and a third in '08.

Looking to further himself as a rider, Steve jetted for Australia where he contested the Australian Supercross Championship in 2010 and 2012 managing to finish a respectable fourth in both years.

Heading into 2013, at twenty-three years old, Scuba Steve decided to pursue his dreams of becoming a supercross rider and went back to the states to race the East Coast AMA Supercross Championship. While that was an experience and a life-long dream for the ambitious semi-pro, his career path made a different calling when he entered the 2013 European Championship EMX250 at the spectacular circuit of Matterley Basin, England as a wild card entry and ended up taking home second overall.

After his impressive performance at Matterley the super talented Brit set his sights on the 2014 European Championship EMX250, which turned out to be a great decision. Admitting it wasn't easy, but clearly enjoying the series Steve will be back in 2015, this time on a Husqvarna, where he will be aiming to defend his title.

BRIAN HSU EMX125 CHAMPION

Rockstar Energy Suzuki Europe's Brian Hsu is potentially the next big name to come out of Europe. The young German, who also comes from Taiwanese heritage, has been making waves in the premier amateur series, the European Championships, for years.

At the tender age of sixteen years old, Hsu has three European Championships to his name. In 2010 he won the EMX65 title, in 2011 he won the EMX85 and in 2014 he added the EMX125 title to his already spectacular résumé.

Along with the remarkable number of European Championships, the talented youngster has also claimed two FIM Junior Motocross World Championship titles. In 2012 Hsu was crowned the FIM Junior Motocross 85cc World Champion and then in 2014 he put a perfect end to a brilliant season with his dominance at the FIM Junior Motocross World Championship which saw him blitz the best 125cc riders in the world for his second world title.

On the heels of his stellar season in 2014, Hsu was awarded MXGP's Jan de Groot award, which is an award that recognizes the rider said to be the world's most promising young talent and has been won by some of the worlds newest legends such as Ken Roczen, Jeffrey Herlings and Tommy Searle to name a few. This year a bigger test looms for Hsu as he makes the leap to the European Championship EMX250, a step that could sculpt him into a serious FIM MX2 World Championship class threat.

ALBIE WILKIE EMX150 CHAMPION

The Honda supported European Championship EMX150 class is a one of a kind class where the winner of the championship is given a sponsored ride for the following year on one of Honda's hottest EMX250 / MX2 teams. In 2014 the winner was a young Brit by the name of Albie Wilkie, who won the title by a narrow two points over Finland's Jere Haavisto. Wilkie, who started riding at the tender age of six-years-old, won three of the five European EMX150 rounds and was only once off the podium. At only fourteen years old, Wilkie will be living the dream this year thanks to his 2014 European Championship EMX150 title, which has landed him with a ride on J-Tech Racing where he will be competing in the premier European Championship EMX250 class.

SAMUELE BERNARDINI EMX300 CHAMPION

Samuele Bernardini is a name that popped up a few years back when he won the most races in the 2011 European Championship EMX125 series, yet lost the championship lead after a crash at the 2011 FIM Junior Motocross World Championship saw him break his wrist and forced him out of the final two EMX125 rounds.

After devastatingly losing a title which was likely to be his, Bernardini went off the radar for a couple of years before returning to the European Championship in 2014 faster than ever. This time round, the energetic Italian from Catalena, Italy was racing the all-new EMX300 class on board a lethal TM Racing Team sponsored TM300.

Leaving no doubt in anyone's mind, the nineteen-year-old was hauling all season long and more or less dominated the EMX300 championship with a whopping ten race wins from a possible fourteen. With such an impressive year, in which he was crowned the first ever European Championship EMX300 champion, Bernardini was noticed by TM's factory MX2 team and has been given an opportunity to compete in the premier series in 2015, the FIM MX2 World Championship.

Having Bernardini, a deserving European Champion, make the transition from the European Championship to the FIM Motocross World Championship is a pleasure to see and just goes to show how important the European Championship series is in any aspiring motocross riders career.
